LAST WEEK'S MEETING

Master of Ceremonies (Emcee) Richard Silverberg welcomed everyone to the regular Sunday meeting of the Club. After the usual announcements, he introduced fellow member David Garmaise. David has an avid interest in movies. He has collected many movies and stores them in digital format using about 350 gigabytes of space. He has excerpted several scenes from some of his favorite movies, which he shared with his fellow members and guests. His title for the video presentation was Taker Me to the Movies. He divided the various movie snippets into four categories entitled: You're Such an Animal; Love is a Many Splendored Thing, Life's Little Moments, and There's No Life Like It.

The first category was from movies that featured animals in some fashion, such as scenes from: Dances with Wolves where Kevin Costner showing his first encounter with a wolf; Jurassic Park where the actors first encounter a huge dinosaur; and Harrison Ford facing a pit full of snakes from one of the Indiana Jones series. But the crowning scene from this category was the classic Mongo (Alex Karras) knocking over a horse with one blow from Blazing Saddles. There was also some animation scenes involving the squirrel with his acorn and our favorite fishes from Nemo.

The second category dealt with scenes involving the love relationship between the characters such as Ben Braddock (Dustin Hoffman) and Mrs. Robinson (Anne Bancroft) in the 1967 film The Graduate. Of course you cannot think of love relationships without Humphrey Bogart (Casablanca) or Omar Sharif and Barbra Streisand (Funny Girl) or Rhett Butler and Miss Scarlett (Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh in Gone With the Wind). These scenes were followed up with the third category about those little moments in life. David chose several scenes from well known movies for this category including: Arthur, Airplane, and Butch Cassidy & the Sundance Kid. Some very well known scenes David included were Indiana Jones (Harrison Ford) confronting a sword waving menace with some fear, then remembering he was armed with a revolver and the classic from Rob Reiner's film, When Harry Met Sally, about which Wikipedia says: The film may be best known for a scene featuring the two title characters having lunch at Katz's Deli in Manhattan. They are arguing about a man's ability to recognize when a woman is faking an orgasm. Sally claims men cannot tell the difference, and to prove her point, she vividly (but fully clothed) fakes one as other diners watch. The scene ends with Sally casually returning to her meal as a nearby patron (played by Reiner's mother) places her order: "I'll have what she's having."

David's video finished with an observation on life with some excellent and oft humorous clips from An Officer and a Gentleman, Master and Commander, Pirates of the Caribbean, and others. Of course everyone should remember Jack Nicholson as the Marine Colonel in A Few Good Men and the scene where Sydney Poitier reveals to Rod Steiger that he is a police officer in the Heat of the Night. One scene from a the well known Humphrey Bogart film The Treasure of the Sierra Madre provide one of the most famous lines in film history, when the Mexican bandit replies: Badges? We ain't got no badges! We don't need no badges. I don't have to show you any stinkin' badges!

After enjoying the entertaining video, Emcee Richard updated everyone on upcoming events and then called on Hawaii Bob Sutterfield to conduct the always informative, interesting, and sometime humorous Open Forum where questions are asked and answered about living in Thailand and Pattaya in particular.
